From Arkansas.
El. Register.—Allow me to thank you for giving space to the affavit of Claud C. Baldwin in last week's issue of the REGISTER, although, as you say, it needs confirmation. It might appear so to me also, had I not followed so closely the trend of events in Colorado the past three or four years.

Beginning with the debauching of the Colorado supreme court, then the thwarting of the will of the people by buying, like so many sheep, the venal Colorado legislature; a crime against civilization greater far than the murder of many Steunbergs. Do you say that men who will do such things would hesitate at murder?
Not content with debauching the courts and legislatures, they deliberately stole the Governorship of Colorado; the highest crime under heaven—the destruction of free government. And the same men are behind the prosecution of Haywood.

Baldwin was an officer of the State troops under Sherman Bell, the author of that beautiful saying, "To hell with habeas corpus, we will give them post mortems." Why shouldn't those fellows talk in Baldwin's presence? Wasn't he an officer of militia, turned over by Gov. Peabody to do their sweet will? Baldwin was a soldier, and as such, I suppose his mouth was closed, until such time as he could sever his connection with the army.
You know soldiers are not allowed to talk for publication. At least I have a distinct recollection that Gen. Miles was severely roasted for so doing.

But these are not all the circumstances that corroborate Baldwin's statements. Geo. H. Shoaf, staff correspondent of the Appeal to Reason, charges the Independence depot explosion and the killing of fourteen men to the Mine Owners Association, and named the men who perpetrated the fiendish crime.
And the Appeal to Reason challenged them to prosecute. The Western Federation of Miners offered a large reward for the arrest and conviction of the men who were responsible for the crime. This explosion, in which fourteen men were killed, was charged to Moyer and Haywood by the mine owners.
Why were they not arrested for it and tried in Colorado, instead of being hauled a thousand miles to be tried for the murder of one man?
Is Steunberg's blood so much more precious than that of fourteen innocent miners? Or were they afraid of an investigation of this horrid crime. Shortly after its commission the Mine Owners and Citizens Alliance forced the duly elected officers of the county to resign and had men of their own liking appointed. And not withstanding these facts no investigation of this tragedy has ever been had. Don't these things corroborate Baldwin's story? If not, why not? F. P. HILBURN.

Practices in all the Courts of the State.

Besides having district supervision over the roads, the highway engineer is to be custodian of the county and township road tools and is to supervise the expenditure of the road fund, no warrants being issued in payment for road work until he has examined and approved the claims.

He is to personally inspect the condition of the roads and bridges, and make report to the county court or the township boards when so required.

He shall meet with all road overseers of the county between the fifth and fifteenth days of March each year, instruct them in the best and most economical way of working the roads and collecting the road funds and, if practical, adopt a uniform system of road work for the entire county. Overseers are required to follow the engineer's instructions. The act also provides for the preparation of a road map by the engineer. It is a long step toward securing a scientific manner of working the roads. There was also a law passed providing for a State highway engineer at a salary of $2400, to be appointed by and to be under the general supervision of the State Board of Agriculture.

The Place of Sanctuary.

In Biblical times they had cities of refuge, which, if the murderer or other criminal reached, he was by law deemed safe. In later times, the criminal took refuge in a sanctuary or church, and clung to the altar. How considerably we have changed since then, both in the character of the offender and the place of resort for safety!
Nowadays, the offender is the big and insolent corporation; the place of sanctuary is the Federal Court.
If the offending corporation can but once reach a Federal Court, it is safe forever more, and can prosecute its campaigns of plunder without further let or hindrance.
Note the unholy glee of the attorneys for the eighteen Missouri railroads when they discovered they could frame up some kind of a technicality, fine and far-fetched though it might be, to get the two-cent fare rate into a Federal Court.
Nobody but a lawyer could see by any rule of common sense how such a technicality would lie, as it demanded the invention of the fiction that the railroads were about to be deprived of their right, but the lawyers do not go by rule of common sense.

While the railroads have evidently sanely realized that it will not do to "monkey" too much with the people, even though they can use the Federal Courts to defeat all legislation, and have adopted the two-cent fare rate generally, the real issue still stands, and that involves the question of the right of one man, a Federal Judge, to come into the State of Missouri and calmly set aside a law of a sovereign State, override its Legislature, its Governor and nearly four millions of people. That is the real point at issue, although the one man in question did graciously permit this nearly four millions of people to try their law temporarily, and further contest of the suit is rendered unnecessary by the action of the railroads. The fact remains that this Judge did indeed usurp the right to deny to a sovereign State the right to legislate concerning its own affairs without his consent. This question involves considerations far deeper and more vital than any mere question of regulating railway fares. It overthrows fundamental principles, and is a usurpation of popular authority so outrageous that in an earlier day of American history, the day that produced men jealous of their liberties and not afraid to maintain them, it might have thrown the country into a future.
But the country now has men of a different stamp from those who followed Washington, or under Jackson, slaughtered the red coats at New Orleans. Modern Americans are so enamored of physical well being, so interested in the Dogs That Clean Sewers.

The municipality of Nice has organ-

His Vanity the Reason.
It is egotism which gets a man into

Why Wood Warps.
An expert has advanced a new theory to explain why the most carefully kiln-dried wood sometimes warps. He says that when the sap is dried out various foreign substances remain in the wood, and these absorb moisture and swell, and thus cause warping.
